Undiplomatic Dialogue: Letters between Carl Berendsen and Alister McIntosh, 1943-1952 (An Auckland University Press Book)

This selection from the fascinating private correspondence between two of the founding members of New Zealand's diplomatic service is a frank, illuminating, and witty exchange on politics at home and abroad by two distinguished public servants. Prepared to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Ministry of Foreign Relations & Trade, it offers unparalleled insights into the diplomatic issues of the postwar world and into the actions of many political figures. The editor, Ian McGibbon, has written an excellent introduction as well as extensive notes that aid the reader to gain a thorough understanding of the correspondence.
